

Spaceship Of Love

ALBUM

LIPKA

Lipka nail their tracks against white walls. Invitations to the vernissage have been sent out long ago. Nowadays, the cool and hip folks sip champagne out of crystal glasses, for the sparkling doesn't make them clink. Comes the Intro, glasses are being refilled. The gallery becomes quiet when Landis and Maître take over.

Lyrical speaking, rubbish (Party With Me) meets prose (Daddy), while trash (No More Beer) and vanguard (Peanuts) meet and greet musically. Lipka are astronauts and dream catchers. The duo gives the hipsters Union Square Kids, the lovers Spaceship I & II in a basket and the critics finally get Marching.

Spaceship Of Love stands and falls with its contradictions. Here, on the front upper right side They Asked Me, a song composed as a humming, preaching restraint yet sticking like carpet tape and in the back bottom left corner Knife, this mean upstart of a song, coiling and spitting and demanding to be heard.

Lipka are neither nit-picker nor gourmets. They are best cooking their own soup. Bon appétit.
